

Wider Than the Sky

The world often measures value by how much noise you can make.

If you don't spark like a firework, they assume you're empty.

*But being quiet isn't a void.
It's an architecture.*

*It means your inside
world is so full...*

THUMP-THUMP-THUMP

...that sometimes you need a little quiet just to hear it.

People think the mind should be a fireworks show. Brilliant, loud, and demanding attention.

But an inward mind is a treasure chest. It doesn't scream to be noticed, but its contents hold a deeper wealth.

*They call it being shy.
They call it being broken.*

As if a puzzle is missing its its pieces just because it takes time to assemble.

*The mind is not a room
to be emptied. It is a sky to be explored.*

*...But the brain isn't broken.
It's just wired inward.*

A watercolor illustration of a person standing on a cliff edge, looking out over a vast, colorful landscape under a dramatic, multi-colored sky. The person is small and stands on the left side of the frame, looking out over a vast, colorful landscape. The sky is filled with large, soft clouds in shades of pink, orange, yellow, and blue. The landscape below is a dense, green forest that stretches to the horizon. The overall mood is contemplative and expansive.

*Because your thoughts are
wider than the sky.
They feel really, really deep.*

*The world tells you to change.
It tells you to open up, to step out of your shell.*

*But a tree doesn't apologize
for growing its roots deep before it reaches for the sun.*

*Quiet people are like the deep ocean.
While everyone is busy riding the surface waves, they are exploring the depths where the real giants live.*

Sometimes, your quietness becomes a shelter for someone else who is overwhelmed.

No one else really wanted
to look at my drawings...
they said they were too weird.

They aren't weird.
They have a whole
story in them.

It's a story that is hopeful without being soft. It doesn't ask the world to coddle the quiet.

It shows that stillness is a form of power. A rock doesn't need to yell at the river to stay grounded.

This is a quiet promise to the reader.
An assurance that you are not invisible
just because you are silent.

A young boy with brown hair, wearing a green long-sleeved shirt and blue pants, sits on a wooden floor. He is petting a small, fluffy, light-brown dog that is lying down. They are in a room with a wooden bookshelf on the left filled with books. To the right is a wooden bed frame with a white pillow and a patterned blanket. A lamp with a yellow shade sits on a nightstand behind the boy. The background is a vast, dark night sky filled with stars, constellations, and a bright nebula. The scene is warmly lit by the lamp and the starlight.

They are vast.
Uncharted.
Endless.

So look closely at the quiet ones. Because what is inside them is bigger than the sky.

The End.